

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation and the end of any opportunity for the American people to get factual information from the media

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. It seems that when you have a media monopoly that these concerns are quickly forgotten.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
